What is Massage Therapy?

Massage therapy is the practice of hands-on manipulation of the body's soft tissue, such as muscles, skin, tendons and ligaments. The general goal of a massage is to improve the well-being and/or health of the client.

One of the biggest proven benefits of massage is the feeling of relaxation and calm, during and after a treatment. This can have considerable effects on the brain and the body's ability to produce hormones and neurotransmitters that reduce stress and improve mood. This can have knock-on effects in improving sleep quality, immune function, mental state, as well as physical and emotional energy levels.

How can I become a Massage Therapist?

The entry level qualification is the HLT42021 Certificate IV in Massage Therapy. This takes 6 months to complete, but would not make you eligible for Private Provider Numbers - which are required so your clients with private health insurance can receive a rebate on your treatments.

The HLT52021 Diploma of Remedial Massage is considered the benchmark qualification in massage therapy. The course takes 12 months full-time to complete, and would make you eligible for Private Provider Numbers mentioned above. There are part-time options available, along with different specialisations such as rehabilitation or sports therapy, which may also extend the duration of the course.

Once you are a qualified Remedial Massage Therapist, you would be eligible to study the 22656VIC Advanced Diploma of Myotherapy. This is the most advanced qualification in this industry for vocational education, and is an additional 18 months of study. In total, it would take you 2.5 years to become a qualified Myotherapist (with no prior experience).

The different courses have different finance and funding options, so we would recommend speaking with a Careers Specialist to determine which course best suits your career goals and financial needs. We offer interest-free payment plans, scholarships, Government Subsidies and Loan options to eligible students.

Am I suited to Massage Therapy?

Our students are generally people who have an interest in health, the human body and helping people. We have helped many people who are qualified in related fields such as personal training, beauty therapy, nursing and/or aged care to study massage therapy. Either to add extra treatment options or skills to their clients, or to start a new career.

We also see people launch an entirely new career by studying massage. Think about whether you've ever given anyone a neck rub and they've told you that you'd make a good massage therapist. Then a career as a massage therapist could be for you! You may also want to consider if you like customer service, you're good at building rapport with people, and you find joy in helping others.

A great way to get a feel for the day in the life of a massage therapist and what's involved, we encourage you to visit our student clinic. You can get a massage from one of our students, hear their experiences and see a busy clinic in action. Again, chat to one of our Career Specialists and they can book you in for a treatment.

Am I suited to at-home or mobile massage therapy?

Setting up your own business and working for yourself is a great option and gives you more flexibility and freedom in your work-life balance goals.

Here are some questions you should ask yourself when considering a career as a massage therapist:

- What is your target (minimum) income working from home?
- What commute time and costs would you save by working from home?
- Ideally how much time would you like to allocate each week to working from home?
- Can you manage your time if you were the boss?
- Can you communicate and build relationships with people to build a client base?
- Do people trust and relate to you?
- Do you like to help people with their physical health and mobility?
- Are you interested in understanding the human anatomy and how the body works?
- Are you prepared to make the effort to be trained to gain a new professional qualification so that you can start your home business or work in industry with other allied health professionals?

If you answered yes to most of the above, then massage therapy could definitely be a rewarding career for you. While working from home could be of interest to you - that is not the only option once you become a qualified massage therapist.

What's the schedule for a Massage Therapist?

Massage therapy can be a great option for someone wanting flexible working hours and the ability to control their schedule. You can determine how many hours you want to work each week, and the ability to fit things in around important events in your calendar.

Depending on the type of clients you want to attract, there might be an expectation that you be available after-hours and on weekends. To cater to clients who are working during standard business hours. However, this might look different if you decide to work in private practice or a multi-modality facility.

How much can I earn as a Massage Therapist?

As a small business owner, you can essentially charge what you think you're worth. Naturally, as you're building up your client base and establishing yourself in the industry, you might want to offer a discounted rate to attract new clients. Once you have grown your business and built up your reputation and experience, you can increase your rates accordingly.

On average, the price for a Remedial Massage treatment is $80 - $100 for a one-hour massage. If you offer mobile treatments, you might want to consider charging extra to cover your travel and time expenses. It is important to note that you would need to consider business expenses for things such as rent, booking and accounting systems, laundry, oil and other operating costs.

The national average earnings for a massage therapist is $35 - $50 per hour.

How do I get Clients?

A big business starts small. Great ventures start from small beginnings, and that includes your small business. The first goal is to get enough bookings and get booked out, for yourself as main practitioner. You can start with a small budget with some of these low-cost marketing ideas:

- Decide what your business looks like – have a clear vision and set clear goals (eg will you have a home clinic or do mobile massage work, or both?)
- Find a name for yourself – register a business name and design a logo.
- Create a Business Facebook page - its free!
- Share your story - on social media channels and direct your friends to your business page. They will be happy to hear that you are having a career change and will want to support you.
- List all your goals in your marketing plan - what you need to do every step of the way.
- Set up a free Google Business Profile – so clients can find you via Google search and Maps. This will link you to your home practicing address and help to bring enquiries to your door.
- Focus on getting “Google Reviews.” - Reviews show up next to your Business Profile in Maps and on Google Search. You can request reviews from customers by sharing a URL specific to your business.
- Ask your clients for feedback – Post and share feedback or testimonials on your business page, other potential clients searching for your business may be prompted to book with you.
- Visual images – get a Bigstock account for a minimal cost and purchase some quality images that you will have the right to use for marketing campaigns and flyers.
- Word of mouth – set up a campaign to get new clients. Ask existing clients to recommend people to see you and offer new clients an incentive for the first appointment.
- Monitor your marketing - add a section on your Health History form with tick boxes: how did you find us? Google / Friend / Advertising / Signage.
- Self Promotion – find ways to share your business. Volunteer at a local community event. Do some massageing at a school fair and hand out flyers. Approach a gym for cross-marketing opportunities. Offer a free morning of seated massages at a market or event, in a visible position. Share your business cards with local businesses. Connect with local practitioners in your area for referrals, eg a Physio, Osteopath or Acupuncturist. Choose complimentary services, even hairdressers or beauty therapists.
- Do I need a website? – not initially, unless you want to appeal to large businesses for corporate work. You can run a small home clinic on a business Facebook page. If you want to go to the expense of creating a website, there are templates available (eg Squarespace) that offer a free trial. If you have some reasonable computer skills, you can get this done yourself and pay a monthly hosting fee. You will also need to register a Domain and pay for this annually, to keep your website live.

What do I need to set up an At-Home or Mobile Clinic?

- Consider your home space - working from home is great, but keeping work separate from family is recommended. Do you want to have the general public, people you don't know, walking into your house? It's ok when it's mainly friends-of-friends. If you can convert a section of your house into a treatment room, this is ideal. With access to its own entrance, bathroom and laundry, is even better!
- Online bookings & receipts – check out and compare PowerDiary, Timely or Setmore. These are a few examples of apps, some give you a free trial to see if you like it.
- Payments & Health fund receipts – receipts can be issued manually after the treatment, when you are just starting out. Down the track, you can set up HICAPS and EFTPOS or Square, via an online payment gateway.
- Cashflow – Start simple with an Excel spreadsheet. Use this to track your monthly income and expenses.
- Schedule / Planning – what does your week and availability look like? Opening on Saturdays is a good business decision, you will always be in demand. Consider when your clients want appointments. Schedule your availability into a calendar and remember to factor in time for admin/marketing and communicating with your clients. These are the hidden business tasks we need to allow time for.
- Get a mentor or coach – don't try to wear all the hats and run around in circles. Seek out people you know in successful businesses, or look for a mentor.
- Join an Association – find networking groups, attend workshops, make contacts, share ideas and get advice. AMT (Association of Massage Therapists) is a not-for-profit company that represents practising Massage Therapists and Massage Therapy Students. There are many associations to choose from, so do some research to find the best one for you.
- Massage industry forums – connect with other like-minded therapists and get invaluable information via a professional Association Forum.
